Supervisor and Mrs. Chas. Doctor of Orland Surprised On Golden Wedding Day

It has been the rare privilege of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doctor, prominent residents of Orland township, to enjoy each other's companionship for half a century and the golden anniversary of their marriage was celebrated Tuesday evening at their home on Wolf Road when the families of their sons and members of their family circle surprised them in honor of the occasion.

Friends of the honored couple had stopped in to extend felicitations on their reaching this important milestone on their life's journey and they had no inkling of the big surprise that was in store for them. Late in the evening members of the family arrived, bringing with them a wonderful array of "good eats" and a long table was quickly set up in the spacious sun parlor of the Doctor home.

To the strains of the wedding march played on the piano by their grand daughter, Miss Dolores Doctor, the honored couple and their guests entered the sun parlor and took their places at the festive table. Flanked by members of their family, the honored couple was seated at the center of the table and later the bride of fifty years ago, cut the golden wedding cake which was a fine creation of the baker's art with its yellow roses, trimmings of lilies of the valley and crowned with a miniature golden wedding bell. A bouquet of the lilies of the valley also graced the festive board.

Mr. and Mrs. Doctor were presented with a basket of fifty beautiful yellow roses, a gift from the Henry Tilsy family and Miss Caroline Tilsy. Following the dinner, the grandchildren put on a clever program replete with musical numbers, recitations, dance numbers, etc., climaxing with the presentation of a gift to the grandparents.

Mr. Doctor's only brother, Oliver Doctor of Rensselaer, Indiana, sent regrets that he was unable to come due to the poor health of his wife.

The guest list was as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tilsy, daughter Helen and Miss Caroline Tilsy; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tilsy, daughter Dorothy and sons Ralph and James; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Doctor, daughters Lucille and Dolores and son Donald; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Doctor, daughter Mildred and sons Gordon and Wendell; Mr. and Mrs. Anil Doctor and daughter Erna and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler.

Charles Doctor was born in Orland township seventy-two years ago and has resided here all his life. Mrs. Doctor nee Mary Tilsy was born in Homer township also seventy-two years ago. On May 19, 1886 they were united in marriage in the old courthouse in Chicago. They were attended by the Holm sisters, later Mrs. Ida Boucher and Mrs. Louis Tilsy. Mrs. Boucher died some time ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Doctor went to housekeeping on the old Doctor homestead farm and in 1920 they located in their present home on Wolf Road. Four children were born to them, three sons, Lawrence, Ray and Anil and one daughter Esther who died a few years ago.

The entire family comes of the old time sterling stock and is highly esteemed, not only in their own locality, but in the surrounding communities as well.

Mr. Doctor has been prominent in the public life of Orland township. He has had the rare record of having public office seeking him instead of him seeking the office. For twenty-two years he has served continuous as township school treasurer of Orland township and for sixteen continuous years has held the office of supervisor of this township. During his long tenure of office he has handled over $900,000 of public funds.

The voters of Orland township have repeatedly returned Mr. Doctor to office and they can certainly feel proud of the excellent record Mr. Doctor has established as a public official.

Mr. Doctor has always had the interest of the public at heart and was a very important figure in securing the paving of Wolf Road thru Orland township.

He is well and widely known for his genial disposition and rugged individuality and sterling character as a private citizen and public official.

Their many friends hope that Mr. and Mrs. Doctor may enjoy many more years of companionship and happiness.

Frankfort Twp. Baseball Team Loses First Game

Ragged playing by the Township team was the cause of the defeat Sunday and gave the Joliet Colored team an unearned victory. Lack of practice has hindered the team considerably and in the next game or two the team should be playing in the form they are capable of.

The management has secured the services of all the best talent in this territory and the fans can confidently look forward to seeing many fine games this season. The team isn't offering any excuses for the defeat as some experimenting must be done before the team can be welded into a smooth-working outfit. The team has good pitching and the hitting is very good as the 13 hits garnered in the first game will testify.

Homerding pitched a great game, allowing only 3 hits until the ninth when the infield started getting fumble-itis, letting 7 runs score on easy ground balls which under ordinary conditions would have been sure outs. The high strong wind not only bothered both teams but made it uncomfortable for the fine bunch of fans who turned out to see the team in its first effort.

Frankfort Township plays Orland Park at Orland Park Sunday and the following Sunday will take on Homer at Frankfort. Game starts at 2:30.

The Ball Club wishes to take this opportunity to thank the members of the Frankfort Band for parading and playing before the game last Sunday. It was an unusual and excellent treat and was enjoyed by all present. Thanks again.

Mr. D. Peterson of Joliet was winner of the G. E. Hot Point Waffle Iron awarded by the club.

Do not stop at flowers. Send other things, such as jellies, fruits, rhubarb, small jars, preferably the half pint size mayonnaise jars, for bedside bouquets and small potted plants. Many of the hospital patients get a great deal of pleasure in watching these little potted plants grow. Think if you were sick and a shut-in, what you would like and send it on to one who is.

Every Wednesday, beginning May 27th will be Tinley Park's day to send flowers. Mrs. Al. Koehler is chairman this year. Flowers on other contributions should be brought to her home Tuesday evening, or, if you will phone her she will be glad to call for them.

You cannot imagine how eagerly patients look forward to "Flower Day" and we should make every effort not to disappoint them.

NOTICE

Anyone who would care to purchase tickets for the Will Co. Centennial Garden and Flower Show may do so by seeing Mrs. Balaz before Thursday, May 28 at special advance ticket price.

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, Barry Gilbert, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a storm. He makes himself at home. Doting at the fireplace, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts; and a chauffeur, Evans. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack Ridder, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. Barry pockets the money, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Montauk, intending to disappear there. On the way he meets Judge Hambridge and his daughter, Patricia. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Thursday. Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer. Mr. Ridder, Sr., through his newspaper, the Globe, accuses Judge Hambridge of taking orders from Tammany Hall in a condemnation proceeding. Barry meets Peter Winslow, prominent attorney. Winslow tells Barry that Judge Hambridge had seen an accident in which a woman was killed by a taxicab. At home Barry finds the wife of the real Jack Ridder awaiting him. Her husband is in jail in New York, charged with the murder of Mike Kelly, Tammany boss. The girl, Peggy, tells Barry how she had met Jack in Florida and married him, as Jay Rogers. Jack lost his job, and they went to New York, where she got work at the Cocoanut Bar. There she was accused of trying to pick the pocket of Mike Kelly, and was arrested. Her husband went to Kelly's to induce him to drop the charge. Later Kelly was found dead, his skull crushed by a decanter. Barry suggests he can help Jack Ridder, and Mrs. Rogers agrees. Judge Hambridge delivers a decision in the condemnation suit in which Kelly had been interested. Barry cables Mrs. Ridder for $2,000. Winslow takes Rogers' case. Barry gets a job on the Globe under his true name. The editor, Ernie Harwood, assigns him to cover the Kelly murder. Barry suspects the Filipino servant of Kelly. When Barry visits the Hambridges, the judge denies the accident he witnessed occurred near the scene of the Kelly murder, where such an accident had occurred. Patricia bids him: "Watch your step, Mr. Gilbert."

CHAPTER V—Continued

Suppose the Judge had killed Kelly. What did that prove? "I'm assuming that Kelly compelled this decision," Barry reminded himself. "Well, if he did, why should it have been filed after the compulsion was removed? It was filed the next morning. That certainly indicates that the Judge knew nothing about Kelly's death."

Once more, Barry heard the hall clock strike three.

"I'm arguing in circles," he thought. "And getting nowhere. That's where I've been getting all week. Gunning things up, too. Tipping off witnesses, and making a complete nuisance of myself. I said three things were clear, and they weren't, but two are. I've landed myself in a mess, and the sooner I get out of it the better for everybody."

"If I clear out, and let things take their course, I might come back, some day, when I've really made good."

His hand still hurt the next morning, but the resolution to "clear out" remained fixed.

And he was still dreaming.

"Some day, when I've made good—" Willetts interrupted.

He was serving breakfast, at the moment.

"I was talking to Evans, sir."

"Yes?"

"Telling him what you told me last night, sir—concerning Mrs. Rogers, and the Kelly murder. Evans thinks it's very significant, what you said about Kelly expecting somebody after Rogers left."

"He does, eh?"

"Yes, sir. And he thinks he can find who it was."

Barry opened his egg.

"He'd like to tell you his scheme, sir."

"It's no use," Barry observed, curtly. "I've decided to drop the whole business."

"Yes, sir."

Willets went on serving, but there was disapproval in his manner. Barry felt it, as he had twice before.

"Any reason why I shouldn't drop it?"

"That's for you to say, sir."

"But you think there is a reason. All right; sit down and tell me about it."

"I couldn't, sir. My position won't permit of my sitting down in the presence of my employer. It isn't done, sir. And your position won't allow of your leaving a woman in the lurch, sir. If you don't mind my saying so, that isn't done, either."

In utter amazement, Barry merely stared at him.

"You see," Willets continued, quite forgetting himself, "a gentleman's got certain responsibilities. That's what makes him a gentleman. You said this lady's 'in trouble up to her neck.' It looks to me, sir, as if that was a pledge. It looks to me as though you were bound to make good, no matter what's happened."

He paused, and then his own impetus carried him on.

"You said, 'I've been a loafer most of my life.' A loafer might 'drop the whole business.' There's no reason he shouldn't. But it looks to me as if a gentleman ought to carry on, sir."

"You're right, Willets. Tell Evans I'll be glad to see him in the library."

Barry, the "bum," had stepped into a gentleman's shoes, and found that they had to be kept shining.

All that Willets had said, the former Duke had said to himself, over and over again. "That's all right for guys with an income," Barry had argued. "In luxury, and papa's office—sure, I'd run straight. Why not?"

Now he had an income, and was "in luxury and papa's office." "I won't be there long," Barry thought, "if I defy Pat. Anyway, I'm a gentleman, for the moment, and a gentleman can't abandon ladies in distress."

Pat was a lady in distress, too, he reflected. "In trouble up to her neck." "The way I went on last night," he ruminated, "anybody'd have thought that I thought the Judge killed Mike. What nonsense. That harmless old chap. If there's any chance of his being involved, why then it's up to me to find who did the trick. I've got two men to get out of difficulties."

Evans found him ready for the "scheme."

"As I get it from Willets," Evans said, "somebody telephoned Kelly that he was coming right over. What would you do after you'd done that, sir?"

"Well, what would I do?"

"You'd hop in a taxi."

"Probably."

"So we want to round up the taxi-drivers that were in the neighborhood at that time. Luckily, there was an accident, Willets tells me. My plan is to advertise—like as if we was the relations of the deceased lady. Fifty dollars reward for information leading to spotting the cab that deceased her."

"And then?"

"Then we third-degree everybody that answers the ad. 'Did you see the accident? How did you happen to be there?' It might turn the trick."

Evans was full of Barry's own zest for "sleuthing." And quite as eager to "jump at conclusions." Nothing discouraged him. What if the accident had occurred two hours after the probable time of the murder? Who knew that time exactly, and, anyway, the bait of reward might bring people who'd been in the vicinity long before the disaster.

It was arranged that the advertisement should instruct applicants to write to box something-or-other at the newspaper. And that gave Evans another idea. Why did Barry go to town by train? Why not drive in? He could use the car getting around, and to give Peggy—and, perhaps, the youngster—an occasional airing. Moreover—

Evans was enjoying himself thoroughly.

"Reading the newspapers, sir, I ask myself a lot of questions about this here Kelly. The Chink says he got home around eleven. Willets says Mrs. Rogers says he left the Cocoanut

"And Why Do You Think It Might Have Been She?"

bar around nine. Where did he go then? His chauffeur would know, wouldn't he? You'd be surprised how chauffeurs loosen up to each other."

"I get you."

"Simple, ain't it? We find out where Kelly garages. Then I drive you in every Sunday, and keep the car in the same place. And I sugar up to the guy that drove Kelly. It mightn't lead to nothing, but then again, sir, it might, sir."

"It's worth trying. And I'm tremendously obliged to you."

"Don't mention it. After what you did for the missis. As a matter of fact, she put the whole thing in my mind. She's just busting to do something for you, Mrs. Evans is."

All of Evans' suggestions were followed the next afternoon.

And Monday, by appointment, Barry brought Mrs. Rogers to Winslow.

Harwood certainly had not overstated Peter's skill at cross-examination. Sitting opposite Peggy, the attorney led her gently into reminiscence, from which, again and again, he seized upon a word or a phrase as leading to possible material for the defense.

For the first time, the thing took on pattern.

Winslow wasn't running about in a maze, but finding a beginning and an end. Taking care, too, that there should be no opening for his opponents of which he had been unaware. Casually, verifying every statement Jack had made to him.

"Tell the story in your own way, Mrs. Rogers. . . . Did your husband say anything about getting even when he left you? No. What time was that? What time did he return? Wasn't gone long, was he? Not really long enough for a violent quarrel?"

"I've told you," Peggy declared; "they were drinking together. And then the phone rang—"

"How do you know it rang?"

"Jack heard it. And he heard someone answer it."

"Someone."

"Jack isn't sure whether it was Kelly or the Filipino. They were both in the hall. Anyway, Kelly came back, and said he was expecting somebody."

"Did he say whom?"

"No."

"Did he say whether it was a man or a woman?"

"I don't think so," Peggy paused.

"But it might've been a woman."

Peter nodded to Barry.

"Cherchez la femme."

"I got another idea," Peggy went on. "It might've been the platinum blonde."

"The what?"

"The platinum blonde. Violet Fane. She's one of the girls at the Cocoanut Bar."

"And why do you think it might have been she?"

"Well," Peggy said, "she knew Kelly. She'd just left him when he accused me of picking his pocket. And Morano'd been talking to her, just before that. She might've phoned Kelly to get me off."

Winslow made a note of this.

"I'll find out," he promised.

The interview lasted nearly two hours, and gave both of the visitors fresh confidence.

"They'll indict Jack," Winslow prophesied, as his callers were going. "Probably today. But don't let that worry you. A grand jury hears only one side. We'll do our talking at the trial."

"When will that be?"

"As soon as possible. We're ready now. They have no case. Just the Filipino's evidence that Jack was there. We admit that. But we deny either a motive or a quarrel. If the Filipino says he heard one—well, I suppose Mr. Ridder's given you his answer to that."

"Yes."

"He's got brains, all right," Barry told Peggy, in the elevator.

"Yes," Peggy returned, a bit throatily. "He's got brains, and a heart."

The grand jury found a true bill against Jay Rogers that afternoon. And Barry was off on a quest of his own. "If that was a woman," he decided, "we needn't bother any more about the Judge. And if I can catch that Filipino napping—"

Winslow had warned him against "tipping our hand." "All right," Barry thought; "I'll be careful this time."

The "cagey Oriental" answered his ring.

Barry's last visit had been with Tim Laugherty. Charlie—and Mrs. Kelly, for that matter—had assumed that he was another detective. The Filipino was plainly startled.

"Nobody is home," he said, conclusively.

"You're home, aren't you? And you're the fellow I want to ask a few questions."

"I don't know nothing," the butler insisted.

"You know who telephoned Kelly the night of the murder."

Charlie's putty face turned two shades lighter.

"I thought so," Barry said. "And, if you don't want to go straight to jail, you'd better tell me about it."

"I don't know nothing."

"All right. Come along."

Charlie reconsidered.

"You mean the lady that telephoned?"

"That's who I mean. Who was she?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't she give any name? Or leave any message?"

"No, sir."

"Came around here though, afterward, didn't she?"

"No, sir."

"Somebody did," Barry persisted; "After young Rogers went?"

"I don't know."

"You didn't let anyone in?"

"No, sir."

"Did Kelly let her in?"

"I don't know."

"But he knew she was coming?"

"I don't know."

"You're lying!" Barry exclaimed.

"You told Kelly."

"No, sir," the butler replied, very positively. "When the lady phoned, Mr. Kelly—he wasn't home yet."

"What do you mean, he wasn't home—at midnight?"

"The lady didn't telephone at midnight," Charlie said, obviously bewildered. "It was eight o'clock when the lady phoned."

"But you told him that?"

"No," the Filipino answered. "I didn't tell nobody nothing."

"Who did telephone around midnight?"

"I don't know. Mr. Kelly answered that time."

"But you were in the hall?"

"Yes, sir."

"Kelly was sore at you. Why?"

The Filipino went pale. Only for an instant, however. Then he smiled. "Mr. Kelly not sore," he said. "Him very jolly that night."

"All right," Barry observed. No "tipping our hand" this time. "All right, and thanks." His tone was that of a man completely satisfied.

Late that afternoon, Barry took Peggy and the boy driving in the park.

Peggy put a brave face on it, but fear was clutching her. "If anything went wrong," she said.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making the Most of Today.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Living for Spiritual Ends.

While this lesson is indicated as the quarterly Temperance lesson, and the various subjects suggested vary in their objective, a more logical theme would seem to be "Jesus Teaches in the Temple." No individual, city, or nation can truly build for the future that disregards what the Bible says about the future.

I. Jesus Warns Against the Scribes (vv. 45-47).

He had just dealt with the disbelief of the Sadducees. The scribes claimed faith, for they were the teachers of the law. They were punctiliously exacting as to its literal observance. They had little understanding of the need of flexibility in applying its principles to human needs. They discovered that Jesus was teaching things contrary to their interpretations. Jesus taught that the law was made for man, and not man for the law. The scribes were publicity seekers, making parade of their wisdom. Sunday school teachers should earnestly pray that they may serve as true messengers of Christ, not as scribes, with only a head-knowledge of biblical matters.

II. Jesus Makes Estimate of Gifts (Luke 21:1-4).

1. Amount counts for little (v. 1). While the rich cast their gifts into the treasury, and observers may have noted that the clatter and clatter of their coin indicated large giving, it is not likely that these gifts meant personal sacrifice or self-denial.

2. Inner conditions determine the value of a gift (vv. 2, 3). In the sight of man the poor widow's deed was not worthy of notice. In the sight of God it merited the immortality of the Bible record. The two-mite gift of the widow revealed her love for God, else how could she spare her all? It revealed her faith in God for tomorrow, for how else would she be fed? It revealed her humility, for she did not withhold her gift because it was so little. Verse 4 is indeed revealing as to Christ's interpretation of the deeper meaning of gifts, for that and the present age.

III. Jesus Prophesies His Return (vv. 5-33).

1. The temple to be destroyed (vv. 5, 6). The temple was the pride and boast of the proud Jew. Such boasting called forth the Lord's declaration that "there shall not be left one stone upon another," a fact that had its fulfillment A. D. 70, when Titus destroyed Jerusalem.

2. The disciples' inquiry (v. 7). There can be no surprise that the disciples should ask for more information about future events. A corresponding verse in Matthew (24:3) should be considered.

3. An order of events was presented to them (vv. 8-24). Perhaps one would not so much say an order, as that he pointed out details on the great canvas of the future.

a. False Christs would appear (v. 8), some claiming to be the Messiah in his first appearing, and some in his reappearing. These make their appeal to such as are not rooted and grounded in the faith. "Go ye not after them."

b. Inevitable wars and commotions (vv. 9, 10) will engulf the nations. "Commotions" signifies tumults, in the absence of war, wrangling within national life, or between nations. The restless follower of Christ is to "be not terrified."

c. Violent persecutions were foretold (vv. 12-19). The believer of today should absorb the meaning and teaching of this marvelous passage of Scripture. "Settle it in your hearts" that Christ will be to his own even as to the tempest-tossed disciples on Galilee, when he said "Peace, be still." And in this connection he spoke the words of the golden text, "In your patience possess ye your souls."

IV. Appropriate Warnings (vv. 34-36).

The grosser sins may not ensnare the believer, but how subtle are the cares of this life. But upon the drunken, the obscene, the frivolous, and upon the follower of Christ alike shall trials and perplexities come. Watch ye therefore, always; pray, always. Only so shall the child of God be ready ("worthy") to escape, and to stand before the Son of God. Benediction is pronounced upon "those who love his appearing."

Christian Worship

All Christian worship is a witness of the resurrection of him who liveth for ever and ever. Because he lives, "now abideth faith, hope, charity."

The milk wagon collided with an auto and many bottles of milk were broken.

A crowd gathered.

"Poor fellow," said a benevolent-looking man, "you will have to pay for this accident, won't you?"

"Yes, sir," said the driver.

"That's too bad, here is a quarter towards it and I'll pass the hat for you?"

After the crowd had contributed and dispersed, the driver said to a bystander:

Snow of Different Colors; Various Reasons Are Found

What a sensation there would be if, instead of white snow, we had different colored varieties, such as have fallen at times in Europe and elsewhere.

Black snow once fell in the Alps. Scientists were extremely interested and investigations followed. It was found that the black was caused by a violent eruption of Mount Etna, the volcano in Sicily, which had thrown millions of tons of ashes and dust into the upper atmosphere.

Hungary also experienced black snow a few winters ago. Close examination revealed that the color was due to myriads of small insects mixed with the snow. When yellow snow fell on the northwest coast of Japan, ten years ago, scientists became curious, and superstitious people considered it an omen of evil import. It was discovered, however, that clouds of the yellow dust from the Gobi desert had been carried across the sea of Japan in snow clouds.

AMAZING NEW STOVE USES 96% AIR-4% FUEL

Housewives Everywhere Now Can Enjoy Modern Gas-Cooking Service At Low Cost, Thanks to W. C. Coleman's Invention

Utilizing the principle of carburization used in present day automobile engines, W. C. Coleman, noted inventor and pioneer manufacturer of gas-pressure appliances, has invented an amazing new cooking stove that makes its own gas from ordinary lead-free gasoline.

An ingenious device converts liquid fuel into vapor gas—then mixes it with fresh, live air so that the fuel, when it reaches the burner, is actually about 96% air and 4% vapor gas. This remarkable invention has effected fuel-saving economies which, combined with the heating efficiency of the Coleman patented Band-A-Blu Burners, makes the new Coleman Safety Range cheaper to use than wood, coal or kerosene.

Housewives everywhere express appreciation for the convenience, safety, economy and beauty of a stove which provides cooking equalling that of the finest city gas range.

Readers of this paper wishing full information about these wonderful Coleman Ranges will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check chart by addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-237, Wichita, Kansas.—Adv.

OUR PLATFORM

On June 20, 1848, Congressman Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois in addressing the House of Representatives said:

"I wish now to submit a few remarks on the general proposition of amending the Constitution. As a general rule, I think we do better to let it alone. No slight occasion should tempt us to touch it. Better not take the first step, which may lead to a habit of altering it. Better rather habituate ourselves to think of it as unalterable. It can scarcely be made better than it is. New provisions would introduce new difficulties and thus create and increase appetite for still further change. No, sir; let it stand as it is."

The Music Hour Club sang at the Methodist Church as part of the Mother's Day services. Rev. Hastings, the pastor of this church, sent this very kind letter of thanks.

Dear Boys and Girls: I want to say a very real "Thank you" for your very fine help in our church service this morning. After church I heard so many people saying fine things about you that I know everyone really enjoyed your singing.

I have heard "Little Mother of Mine" sung many times, but never more beautifully than you did it. One could see very plainly that as your theme song suggests, you really sing for the love of the singing. A group that can smile and sing all at once just can't be beat.

I liked also your ability to sing with your eyes wide open and your chins up, with your faces directly toward your audience. A lot of adult choirs can't do half so well. The very close attention you paid to your director was mighty fine.

None of what I said is flattery—I really mean it. My one suggestion is that you get more boys in your

Midlothian Boosters
Open Season

In one of the most hectic baseball games in this territory in some time the Midlothian Boosters took their official opening Midwest league encounter from the Maciejewski Supervisors by a 7 to 6 score.

Amid much wind and dust the game proved to be an unpleasant game for the fans to watch as the players on both teams let many ordinary fly balls drop for base hits.

Manager L. C. Carty started Dave Smith on the mound against the Supervisor nine. Smith worked hard all during the game due to the many errors and misjudged fly balls, but limited the visitors to ten safe hits while passing four and setting twelve down via the strike-out route.

Sukkey and Wiswald shared the pitching honors for the losers and were touched for eleven hits while walking three and fanning only four batsmen.

Maciejewski's stepped out to an early lead as they scored a run in the first inning, they held this lead until the third when Midlothian sent a run scampering across the platter. Maciejewski's counted one run in the fifth, one in the sixth and three in the seventh while Midlothian scored two in the sixth and three in the seventh.

Manager Carty used a various array of players in the game in order to gather a winning combination but due to the wind and dust the players were unable to display their true ability.

Midlothian Boosters have asked to express through the columns of this paper their appreciation for the kind contribution of Bob Lewis, Treasurer of Midlothian.

Next Sunday, May 24, the Midlothian Boosters will tackle the strong Higgins Boosters in their second Midwest league encounter at 152nd and Crawford avenue, at 3 p. m. Everyone is invited to attend all Midlothian Booster games.

It is our plan next Sunday to have two public services in our church, one at eleven and the other at eight o'clock. At the morning hour, Mr. Stanley Wiese will be guest preacher. He will give consideration to the theme, "How Shall We Live?" A man's physical existence is only part of his real life. What matters most is not THAT we live, but HOW we live. Socrates and Jesus chose to live nobly, but in so doing had to forfeit their existence. Society has an obligation to see that men have a chance to live worthily. Are we living up to that obligation? You are invited to share in this service of worship, and to think thru some of these questions with our guest preacher.

In the evening we shall conduct a service built around the popular practice of the forum. Your minister will discuss the theme, "Prophecies and the Rest of Us." He will seek to interpret the motivation and goal of the prophetic, or so-called "radical" mind of our day as it is finding expression in many church leaders. At the close of the sermon, the congregation will be given an opportunity to ask questions of the speaker. We believe that such a procedure as this is well fitted to help us to think thru certain phases of our modern life which are too often neglected.

Special musical numbers for the evening service will be provided by Miss Pearl Hoose and Mr. Wiese, both of whom have recently appeared in our community. We shall anticipate a fine attendance both morning and evening.

At the present writing plans are completed for laying the new carpets which the Ladies Aid is purchasing for our church building. These will be in the building by next Sunday.

There will be a meeting of the official board of the church next Saturday evening, at seven thirty o'clock, in the church building. All members are urged to be present.

Roosevelt Vote In Ohio Far Exceeds G. O. P. States

The vote for President Roosevelt in the Ohio primary recently was described by the Associated Press as "a sweeping endorsement," on the basis of unofficial returns from 7258 of the State's 8,579 precincts. This tabulation showed 419,622 votes for the President and 27,137 for Col. Henry Breckinridge, of New York, who campaigned in Ohio for the Democratic presidential nomination.

No Republicans were entered on the ballot for presidential preference but the Roosevelt vote exceeded by 62,441 the total vote cast for the heads of the Taft and Borah slates for delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention. The head of the Taft, or "uninstructed," G. O. P. set of delegates-at-large received 229,017 and the head of the Borah slate 128,164, a total Republican vote of 357,181, as compared with the President's vote of 419,622. The Republican contest was bitterly fought and brought out a full vote.

In the West Virginia primary held on the same day, President Roosevelt received 160,345 votes in 1,300 of the State's 2,347 precincts to 48,349 for Senator Borah, who was unopposed on the Republican ticket for presidential preference. As was the case in Ohio, interest centered in the struggle between the liberal and reactionary Republican factions and in the selection of nominees in both parties for State, congressional and local offices.

Strangely 'Lost' Story of Mrs. Taft's Endorsement

"It will be disastrous if President Roosevelt is not re-elected but I believe he will be," said Mrs. William Howard Taft in an interview with the Charleston (S. C.) News-Courier.

"Although I have always been a Republican, I believe that no one except President Roosevelt can fill the place under present conditions," added the widow of the genial twenty-seventh President of the United States and mother of Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, who at the time of her interview was already assured of the favorite-son vote of the Ohio G. O. P. at the Cleveland Republican convention.

A feature of Mrs. Taft's coming out publicly for the re-election of President Roosevelt was described as follows by the New York bureau of the Baltimore Sun:

"Strangely enough, Mrs. Taft's decision, made over a fortnight ago in Charleston, S. C., was apparently 'lost' in the wire stories that day."

Apparently, the surprising announcement continued to be "lost" insofar as the Republican press was concerned.

BIG DROP IN FORECLOSURES; SHARP CONSTRUCTION GAINS

Foreclosures of all types of real estate throughout the country during March continued to register a sharp decrease, bringing the total for the first quarter of 1936 down 26.7 per cent from the figure for the first quarter of last year.

At the same time building permit records show that the volume of residential construction for the quarter gained 104.2 per cent as compared with 1935, 372.5 per cent in comparison with 1934 and more than a thousand per cent compared with 1932.

The foreclosure data is based on monthly reports to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board from 830 identical communities throughout the country, both urban and rural, representing 50 per cent of the entire population.

The most important among the factors contributing toward a freer flow of mortgage money for new construction from areas where it is abundant to areas where it is scarce is the Federal Housing Administration's activities in the insurance of refinanced mortgages on existing property. While the insurance of refinanced mortgages on existing property does not release new capital for mortgage lending on new construction, it keeps the nation's supply of such funds flowing freely where they are needed most. This is because insured mortgages, whether on new construction or existing property, are marketable. Mortgage investments were not always marketable investments and the old style mortgage was not an investment on which a bank could readily realize cash when it needed it.

Rubinoff Holds World Record for Broadcasting

Rubinoff and his violin—and Chevrolet—are a combination that few, if any, radio listeners in the United States have not received in their homes via the air. The famous violinist and his Stradivarius, stars of the Chevrolet Musical Moments programs, have the distinction of going on the air from more broadcasting stations than any other program in the history of radio. Three hundred and seventy-eight stations broadcast Rubinoff three times a week, a total of 1134 fifteen-minute programs. That figures out at 293 hours, and if one week's program were broadcast one after the other, day and night, it would require 11 days. The illustration shows Rubinoff, carrying his precious violin, posing with his car after a special appearance at Detroit.

First New Roby Speedway Race To Be Run June 7

A. A. A. sanctioned auto races will be staged for the first time this year in the Chicago area on Sunday afternoon, June 7th at the new Roby Speedway, located at 106th and Indianapolis Blvd., on Chicago's southeast side, according to Carl Stockholm, race promoter who'll be remembered as one of the leading Six Day Bike Riders of a few years back.

The Roby Speedway offers an excellent track, 80 feet wide and pronounced by racing officials as a marvelous course. The plant with its improved grandstands and modern appointments will house a series of speed events during the summer.

The A. A. A. contest board has mailed entry blanks to the champion ship drivers and it is expected that two score or more of the best speedway and dirt track pilots will be on hand for the inaugural competition. Blanks have been mailed to Kelly Pettilo, winner of last year's Indianapolis 500, Babe Stapp who carried away all honors in Midwest circles last season, and Wilbur Shaw who trailed Kelly Pettilo over the finish line to cop second place 23 seconds behind the winner at Indianapolis on last Memorial Day.

A hundred miles of racing will be scheduled in addition to the time trials and the new racing promoters have promised that a stellar field will be on hand.

Free parking has been provided for 5000 cars. Time trials are scheduled for 10 a. m. and the first race will start at 2:30 p. m. Chicago time.

Former Governor Len Small Dies Suddenly

Death came very suddenly to ex-governor Len Small in the St. Mary hospital in Kankakee Sunday afternoon. He had undergone a minor operation last week. Few of the former governor's friends knew he had re-entered the hospital for treatment of an old ailment.

Former Governor Len Small was a power in Illinois Republican ranks for a third of a century.

Known as "the good roads Governor"—more than 7,000 miles of paved highways were constructed during his two terms of office—he was a candidate for nomination as Governor six times. He was nominated 3 times and elected twice.

During his administration Illinois was virtually pulled out of the muddle.

In the 1936 primary he ran second to C. Wayland Brooks, the party nominee, polling 266,963 votes to the 596,445 piled up by the winner.

Small was born on a farm near Kankakee, June 16, 1862. He was the son of Dr. A. L. Small, a physician. He was christened Lenington but later chose to be called "Len."

Small first turned to farming after a state normal school education. In 1895 he launched his long political career by winning a place on the Kankakee county board of supervisors. The following year he became clerk of the circuit court and then scaled the party ladder as a member of the state hospital board and as a state senator. He stepped from the state senatorship to the state treasurer's office. Completing his tenure of office there he was placed in charge of the Chicago sub-treasury in 1908 by President Taft. In 1916 he was elected state treasurer again.

He was first elected to the governorship in 1920. He was re-elected to this office in 1924 on a good roads platform.

Surviving are two sons, Leslie, publisher of the Kankakee Republican-News, and Budd who operates the former governor's farm at West Kankakee, a daughter, May, wife of Col. A. E. English. Small's wife, the former Ida Moore, died in 1922.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. at the Small residence in West Kankakee. The Rev. W. H. Crane, pastor of the First Methodist church and the Rev. M. L. Johnson, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church officiated.

Burial was made in the family lot in Mound Grove cemetery near Kankakee.

BILLY MINK FINDS A TRAP

FOR two days Billy Mink saw nothing more of the man who had made him suspicious. But this didn't make Billy feel any easier in his mind. He had a feeling that that man had visited the Laughing Brook for no good purpose. He had a feeling that that visit had something to do with himself. So Billy became more watchful than ever and traveled up and down the length of the Laughing Brook more often than ever, trying with eyes and nose to find out just what that man had been about.

The third day after that first visit the man came again. Billy saw him almost as soon as he reached the Laughing Brook, but not quite. The man had come down the Laughing Brook a little way before Billy discovered him. Just as he had done the first time, Billy followed the man down the Laughing Brook. Just as before, the man seemed to be looking for something. Billy watched him until finally he tramped off through the Green Forest. Then Billy turned and hurried back to the place where he had first seen the man that morning.

He Crossed Back and Forth From One Bank to Another.

"He didn't do anything while I watched him but poke about and seem to be looking for something," muttered Billy. "I wonder if he did anything else before I discovered him. I think I'll look to see that everything is all right up the Laughing Brook."

So Billy went up the Laughing Brook above the place where he had first seen the man that morning. He crossed back and forth from one bank to the other and he examined every stick and log and hole as he went along. Being suspicious, he took the greatest care not to step anywhere until he had first looked to make sure that it was safe.

His nose told him just where the man had been, but for some time he found nothing suspicious. Everything was just as it should be. Nevertheless, Billy was filled with uneasiness. He couldn't get rid of a feeling that something was wrong somewhere. Presently he came to a hole in the bank, a hole with which he was very familiar. From that hole came the most appetizing smell. Now Billy was hungry. He had spent so much time following that strange man that he had had no chance to eat for some time.

The smell from that hole was of fish. That fish was in the back of the hole. There was no doubt about that. All Billy had to do was to go in and get it, and that is what he was tempted to do. Then in a flash a thought came to him. There never had been a fish in there before, so why should there be now? With the greatest care Billy began to examine everything around that hole. In the water just at the entrance to that hole were some dead leaves held down by a little bit of mud. Billy didn't remember ever seeing those leaves before. Very cautiously he reached out and lifted them. Underneath was a trap.

THE BANANA MYSTERY

THE magician says that the price of a banana is 5 cents. He lays a nickel on the table and peels a banana in the customary way. Then he puts down 5 pennies and peels a second banana.

Since five coins were paid for this one, the banana is found to be divided into five separate sections. Yet it appeared to be in its natural state before the peeling.

The banana is prepared. Push a needle under the skin and out at the side. Thread it back through the same hole and continue around the banana until the needle finally comes out at the starting point. Pull out the thread. This slices the banana.

Perform the operation at four points to divide the banana into five pieces. The banana will pass inspection prior to the peeling.

REPENTANT SUNS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

DAY, and the bright intensity
Of sunlight on a summer sea,
That lays a path of burning brass
Across a waste of molten glass.
The day so often is too bright,
Too full of passionate delight,
Of blazing brass we think is gold,
We think that happiness will hold.

But not until the day is done
One knows the glory of the sun,
And only at the edge of eve
His tender glances shall receive.
He turns as some one who departs
Turns always to neglected hearts,
And gives the world a look at last
Of kindness, when his day is past.

For suns, and men, and all things great,
With gentleness will always wait.
Yes, not until the day is done,
Another's battle lost or won.

We turn to give him words of praise—
As suns repentant end their days
With purple seas and rosy skies
Almost too late for weary eyes.

"Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend
Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—With the national convention of the Republicans only a week away, New Deal strategists are biding every effort toward a program designed to make a knock-down and drag-out fight of that session. It is not disclosing any secret to say that the New Dealers are using this weapon up to the hilt because disruption of the Republican party would make victory easy for Candidate Roosevelt.

Predictions in politics always are perilous. Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas seems to be in the lead at this time for the Republican nomination, but there are many observers throughout the country who contend that the "Kansas Coolidge" cannot win, and that various other aspirants for the nomination, men whose hats are in the ring, likewise must be counted out. This is to say that a feeling is growing that a dark horse will be nominated.

From the strictly Washington viewpoint, which may be different than elsewhere in the country, astute political observers are convinced that there must be a swift change in sentiment to keep the nomination away from Governor Landon. Yet, it must be said that politics is fraught with just such things and so it is entirely possible that the Republican nominee may be someone other than the present apparent leader in the race.

Those who feel that Governor Landon will be the nominee claim he has played his cards well. But others insist that the Kansas governor made a bad mistake in allowing his name to be linked with the Hearst faction in California. Indeed, I have heard comment that this fact alone will defeat Governor Landon.

It has been interesting to observe the maneuvers of the New Deal strategists with reference to the Landon boom. Some observers contend that the efforts being put forth from New Deal quarters in an attempt to discredit Governor Landon were being engineered because the New Deal fears Governor Landon as a Roosevelt opponent more than it fears some of the other candidates for the nomination. Frank R. Kent, the Washington commentator for the Democratic Baltimore Sun, asserted that the New Deal activity against Landon's nomination constituted "the best evidence of the increasing probability" of the Kansas governor's nomination. Mr. Kent did not say that which some other informed writers feel, namely, that the Landon candidacy would mean a bitter campaign on the part of the Roosevelt forces to re-elect the President. Nevertheless, it has been interesting to note the various ways in which Roosevelt spokesmen and Democratic publicity men have been trying to show the country that Governor Landon is not the man who should be nominated.

I have no quarrel with these efforts. It is the game of politics. Virtually anything goes. It is to be assumed that present Republican maneuvers will be concentrated in a few weeks on Mr. Roosevelt personally as the Democratic candidate. In fact, one hears expressions around Washington that for the first time in Mr. Roosevelt's political career, he is going to be directly under fire.

Just in this connection, one can recall that through most of the New Deal administration, criticism of New Deal policies and plans, almost without exception, was directed at Roosevelt appointees. The President himself has been exceptionally free from the type of personal attack that frequently characterizes political opposition. He has had absolutely none of the kind of criticism that occurred in the Hoover administration and was directed at Herbert Hoover, personally.

So, as we look at the campaign picture just ahead of the Republican convention and only a month in advance of the meeting of the Democrats at Philadelphia where President Roosevelt will be renominated, without opposition in his own party, I think it can be said without fear of contradiction that both candidates this year are going to be smeared personally just as fast and as long as the ammunition holds out.

While we are talking about the forthcoming quadrennial conventions, the two keynote speakers naturally enter into any discussion.

The Keynoters
Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky will do the keynoting for the Democrats at Philadelphia and Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon will deliver the main address to the Cleveland convention of the Republicans. Senator Barkley was the keynoter at the Chicago convention when Mr. Roosevelt was nominated by the Democrats four years ago and, although it is a subject not freely discussed, it is said in high places that Mr. Roosevelt wanted the same man to do the job again, believing the Kentucky to be an omen of good luck.

The selection of Senator Steiwer was one of those things that can be said to be a surprise and yet not a surprise. He is, without doubt, a good man for the job. Yet in some quarters there is a conviction that Senator Steiwer was picked by the so-called "Old Guard" of eastern Republicans. Some observers still hold the belief that the selection of Senator Steiwer was not wholly pleasing to the Landon forces but be that as it may, there has been no particular ill feeling created by it. If it represents a piece of strategy by the eastern Republicans who were dealing with their problem by remote control, they apparently have played into the hands of the more liberal wing of Republicans. It is being predicted rather freely that the Oregon senator's keynote speech will lean strongly to the liberal side but that it will stress sound economics.

The best advance information obtainable on Senator Barkley's plans is that he will devote the bulk of his time on the convention platform to a review of Roosevelt accomplishments in the belief that such a review will take his presentation out of the class of a "defense" speech. Those with whom I have talked concerning the Barkley speech believe he has adopted a smart political course; that he feels there is no need to defend anything that has been done and that the record itself is the thing upon which the Democratic party can make a plea for re-election of Mr. Roosevelt.

Having observed Senator Barkley in action in the senate for a number of years, I believe I am justified in saying that he is a square shooter and a fighter. In this respect, he and Senator Steiwer, the Republican keynoter, are much the same type of man and, therefore, if either convention gets off on a wrong foot, the fault will lie with the convention managers rather than with the proposals offered by the men who are supposed to lay before the delegates a rough outline of their respective party's campaign policies.

Concerning the record of the keynoters in the senate, each stands foursquare. Senator Barkley has consistently battled in behalf of the President and New Deal policies throughout Mr. Roosevelt's administration. Senator Steiwer has been just as consistent in his opposition. Certainly, Senator Steiwer has been much more outspoken against New Deal policies than most of his Republican colleagues, and much more so than Senator McNary.

For many months Washington has heard the plaint of business leaders who wanted to fight socialist schemes and unsound economic policies given birth by New Deal brain trusters but were afraid to do so because of "retaliation." Almost constantly, information has filtered into Washington to the effect that if a corporation undertook to oppose New Deal plans vigorously, there was danger that some agency of the government would "crack down" on them. Much of this information has been taken by Washington observers with a grain of salt but a different aspect has been placed on the situation lately.

It was in the senate that a New Deal Democrat, Senator Homer T. Bone of Washington, broke loose with statements that seemed to substantiate the fear voiced so frequently by business. Senator Bone charged that there was a veritable and "budding OGPU" organized within the government. The OGPU, as most persons realize, is the secret spy system of the Russian Soviet and I think no one in this country has a complete knowledge of its vicious character. So, when Senator Bone likened the espionage system in our government to the OGPU, he was making, to my mind, one of the most serious charges yet leveled at the Roosevelt administration.

Of course, Senator Bone was attacking this espionage system because of a feeling that it might be used to coerce members of congress and even executive or administrative officers of the government who were opposed to plans propagated by Presidential advisers. His thought obviously concerned the political phases of such a system, but the fact that he brought the matter to public attention serves, in a measure, certainly, to substantiate some of the claims that business interests have made.

I am unable, however, to reconcile Senator Bone's position respecting the OGPU which he charged was in operation within the government and his utter silence when the obnoxious senate lobby committee, headed by Senator Black, Democrat of Alabama, engaged in the wholesale seizure of private telegrams. It will be recalled that I reported in these columns how Senator Black and agents of the Federal Communications commission went into the files of the Western Union Telegraph company and carried off literally thousands of private telegrams. I was convinced then and I repeat it now that the Black seizure was nothing more than an attempt to dig up dirt on anybody against whom they could find discrediting information. Yet, Senator Bone, by his silence, condoned that course only to denounce later the systems of so-called "inspectors" used by Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior and reputedly by several other agencies of the government. I can only hope that if Senator Bone's charges are true that the usual condition will result, namely, that there will be other spies to spy on these spies.

Tremendous Turnip

THINGS are done in a big way, down in the Ozarks.

That's what Len B. Mitchell learned on his journey to Hot Springs, Ark. Mitch stayed overnight in the cabin of a hospitable mountaineer, and after supper had been disposed of and the hound dogs fed, he and his host discussed life's problems.

"I cleared four square acres here when I moved in, built this cabin and an eight-foot fence from the timber," recited the mountaineer.

"Then I planted the land to corn that wouldn't grow. Next I tried a field of turnips. The only turnip that came up was exactly in the center of my cleared ground but the growing it did, more'n made up for the failure of the rest of the crop."

"That turnip grew and grew and nothing would stop it. I just wish those turnips that didn't come up could have seen it. My, but they'd been ashamed."

"Well sir, before I could harvest that lusty vegetable it got so big it pushed down my eight-foot fence on all four sides."

On his return home, Mitch stopped again at the cabin. And he was questioned by the mountaineer.

"What's going on in the city?" asked that worthy. "Any manufacturing?"

"Yes," answered Mitch, "where I went they are building the largest kettle ever known. It's 440 feet across and 79 feet high."

"What in tarnation will they use it for?" asked the Ozarkian.

"They'll cook your turnip in it," replied Mitchell.

The Deflated Bear

BRIEF as the deer hunting season is, hundreds of city dwellers invade the Wisconsin woods every fall.

Two of them established a camp consisting of cabin, supply of canned food and condiments, and a nearby spring for drinking purposes.

One day, and this is vouched for by August C. Hennig, American Legion leader in Illinois, the hunters returned to camp and found they had left the door of the cabin open.

Bear tracks were sprinkled liberally outside and within the cabin signs of an invasion were unmistakable. Canned goods weren't disturbed but a six-pound bag of dried apples and a two-pound sack of salt were missing.

The hunters sped immediately to the spring and found the bear had knelt there for a long draft to wash down his salty luncheon.

Following the trail again, the hunters traveled only 200 yards when they discovered Mr. Bruin, growling helplessly and swollen to immoderate proportions. The long drink had made the dried apples swell and the bear's expanding stomach had grown larger and larger until finally his feet no longer touched the ground.

The four-cornered balloon was at once dispatched by the nimrods. Before securing the pelt, one of them, who was musically inclined, deflated the bear by inserting a reed instrument in its side and practicing the finger movement for such tunes as "Over the Waves," as the bloated subsided.

When the bear was completely deflated the hunter had become recognized as an accomplished musician.

Pale as Paste

HIS personal physician, Doctor Ramsey, once concocted a sticking substance of unparalleled strength, asserts Harry W. Ewert of the Chicago Board of Trade weighing department.

"Doc kept the ingredients of his great invention secret," Ewert says. "But I can tell you it was composed partly of a mixture of parboiled fishhooks, mustard plasters and worn out Scotch pocketbooks."

"My friend's only difficulty was in obtaining capital necessary for its manufacture in bulk. So he decided to demonstrate its holding qualities."

"The doctor wheeled out his small stunt plane one day and hired an aviator to fly it. He dropped a small line, approximately the dimensions of a human hair, from the plane and grabbed ahold of it. Then he clung tight while the aviator made a perfect takeoff."

"Doctor Ramsey rode through the air with the greatest of ease for more than two hours, dangling from the hairline, which of course, was fastened to the plane by the sticking liquid."

"When they alighted it was necessary to burn away three and three-quarter inches of the plane's surface with an acetylene torch in order to detach the hair."

"The doc was pale as paste after his adventure but the demonstration proved a boon to everyone, including the manufacturer who sold doc a new plane."

Reducing Gold Chloride

When a solution of gold chloride is reduced to gold under carefully controlled conditions the metal is formed in particles whose diameter is of the order of a millionth of an inch. Such particles, writes Dr. Thomas M. Beck, in the Chicago Tribune, are entirely too small to settle out of solution within any measurable time interval. Moreover, they possess electrical charges, quite small ones, but sufficient to prevent them from sticking together and forming larger particles.

TOO FEW FLOWERS ARE PLANTED FOR SAKE OF PERFUME

Many plant flower beds for color and decorative masses, kitchen gardens for utility, herb gardens for savor, but only a few plant for perfume in the garden or in cut flowers.

Women of Martha Washington's time knew how to save the delicate scent of rose petals by putting them in jars with salt, or they made a potpourri of different flowers. They gathered damask, roses, and lavender and dried them to make linen drawers sweet, or used violet water. They liked the scent of lilies-of-the-valley and lilacs.

It is possible to plant shrubs and vines and flowering annuals and perennials to add to the fragrance of the garden—roses, English violets, carnations, and little clove pinks, and some of the fragrant peonies for indoor vases, say floriculturists in the United States Department of Agriculture.

The perfume garden is so planned that one group of plantings is succeeded by another, each with its own appeal, such as sweet alyssum, mignonette, pinks, perennial phlox, sweet hellebore, stocks and some of the nicotianas. Nasturtiums have a spicy fragrance. The leaves of rose geranium are both fragrant and spicy and may scent a fingerbowl or flavor a mild jelly.

Many shrubs are delightfully fragrant—the reddish velvety "sweet-shrub" or Calycanthus; lemon verbena; lilac; and mockorange, called Philadelphus or syringa in the North, Carolina cherry in the South; the butterfly bush (erroneously called "summer lilac") from China, whose long drooping rich violet blooms give off deep fragrance all summer. The sweet-scented summer-blooming honeysuckle vine of the South is the naturalized Japanese honeysuckle, Lonicera japonica, ranging from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Missouri south; the beautiful and fragrant Chinese and Japanese wisteria, and various sweet species of clematis.

Hazard Proves Real

In her home beside a 120 foot eucalyptus tree Mrs. Jenny Prosek lived in fear it might topple her way. She breathed easier as San Francisco workmen chopped away at it. A guy rope broke. The tree fell the wrong way and crushed Mrs. Prosek's house.
